North Shore & Brookline Endodontics (NSB Endo) is a specialty practice limited to root canal therapy. Their mission is to alleviate dental pain and save teeth that would otherwise be lost. They use the latest advancements in endodontic treatment to ensure patients experience the most comfortable, gentle, and effective treatment possible.

What does your practice treat and why is it the best?

At NSB Endo, our primary goal is to help patients save their natural teeth. Our practice specializes in endodontics, commonly referred to as root canal therapy. We provide patients with both routine and urgent endodontic care. Every day we see patients whose lives have been interrupted by dental pain and infection. We are here to relieve that pain and get patients back to their routine. Our doctors possess the knowledge, experience, and technology to manage dental symptoms and save teeth with a simple, pain, and anxiety-free procedure. Our highly trained and experienced staff is here to make sure that you receive the best experience possible.

For more than 50 years, our reputation for clinical skill and professionalism has led trusted local dentists to refer their patients to our practice. We honor this trust by providing our patients with prompt attention, high-quality care, and respect.

Where did you study medicine?

The endodontists at NSB Endo have all received certificates of advanced graduate studies from Boston University, Harvard, Tufts, and other prestigious institutions. Endodontists are dentists with two or more years of advanced education and training in root canal techniques and procedures. In addition to treating routine cases, they are experts in performing complicated procedures and treating difficult cases.

The endodontists at NSB Endo include Drs. Peter Morgan, Yuri Shamritsky, Fiza Singh, Andrew Bradley, Paul Talkov, Andrea Chung Shah, and Samantha Synenberg.

Name one thing that sets your practice apart:
